Unifying Humanity

In traditional Aboriginal communities, everything and everyone was connected, people lived in harmony with each person knowing their nature, place and purpose while being connected to their anchor and source. When people align with their nature, place and purpose and connect with their anchor and source they live with integrity. In Aboriginal culture, systems were in place to build integrity at different ages through all parts of the community. Through our Unifying Humanity series of workshops we help align and connect people.

Part 1. Nature, Place and Purpose – 3 x one day workshops

1. Journey to your place:

- The path to being centred
- The path to being balanced
- The path to being grounded
- Balance and harmony

2. Finding your core nature:

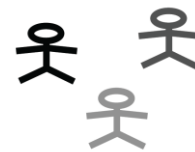

- Identifying your core
- What your core means
- How your core interacts with other cores
- How your core grows

3. Uncovering your purpose:

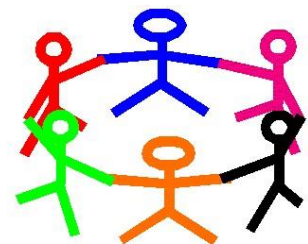

- Self and Life purpose
- Public versus hidden purpose
- Why I can't find my purpose?
- Where to now?

One person dominates and everyone adopts their nature.

Not knowing your nature, place or purpose.

People are equal and free to be who they are. They are respected for who they are (their nature), their place in the team and each will have an obvious purpose (job role) and a hidden purpose (are the glue, the heart and soul, the legs or the arms).

Part 2. Anchor and Source – 2 day 'on country' workshop

1. Connecting to your anchor:

- How to use your senses to anchor
- Understanding self-organisation
- Discovering the space in between
- Ways of knowing

2. Knowing your source:

- How to use your elements to connect to your source
- Introduction to the hidden patterns of life
- Creating harmony and flow
- Expanding consciousness

Our Philosophy:

- Simple, integrated and inclusive
- Connect, integrate, expand
- Plan, act, reflect
- Knowledge, experience, practice
